Why Choose B&D Builders for Your Equestrian Facility?

Since 2000, our skilled designers and craftsmen have brought creativity and attention to detail to hundreds of buildings, from simple bank barns to large equestrian arenas. So we know building. But more importantly, we know your horses.

Our families have worked with horses and the buildings they call home for generations. We were raised with that knowledge, and we understand the equestrian lifestyle. A custom B&D equestrian facility meets all of your—and your horses'—needs, and its durability ensures it can be enjoyed for generations to come.

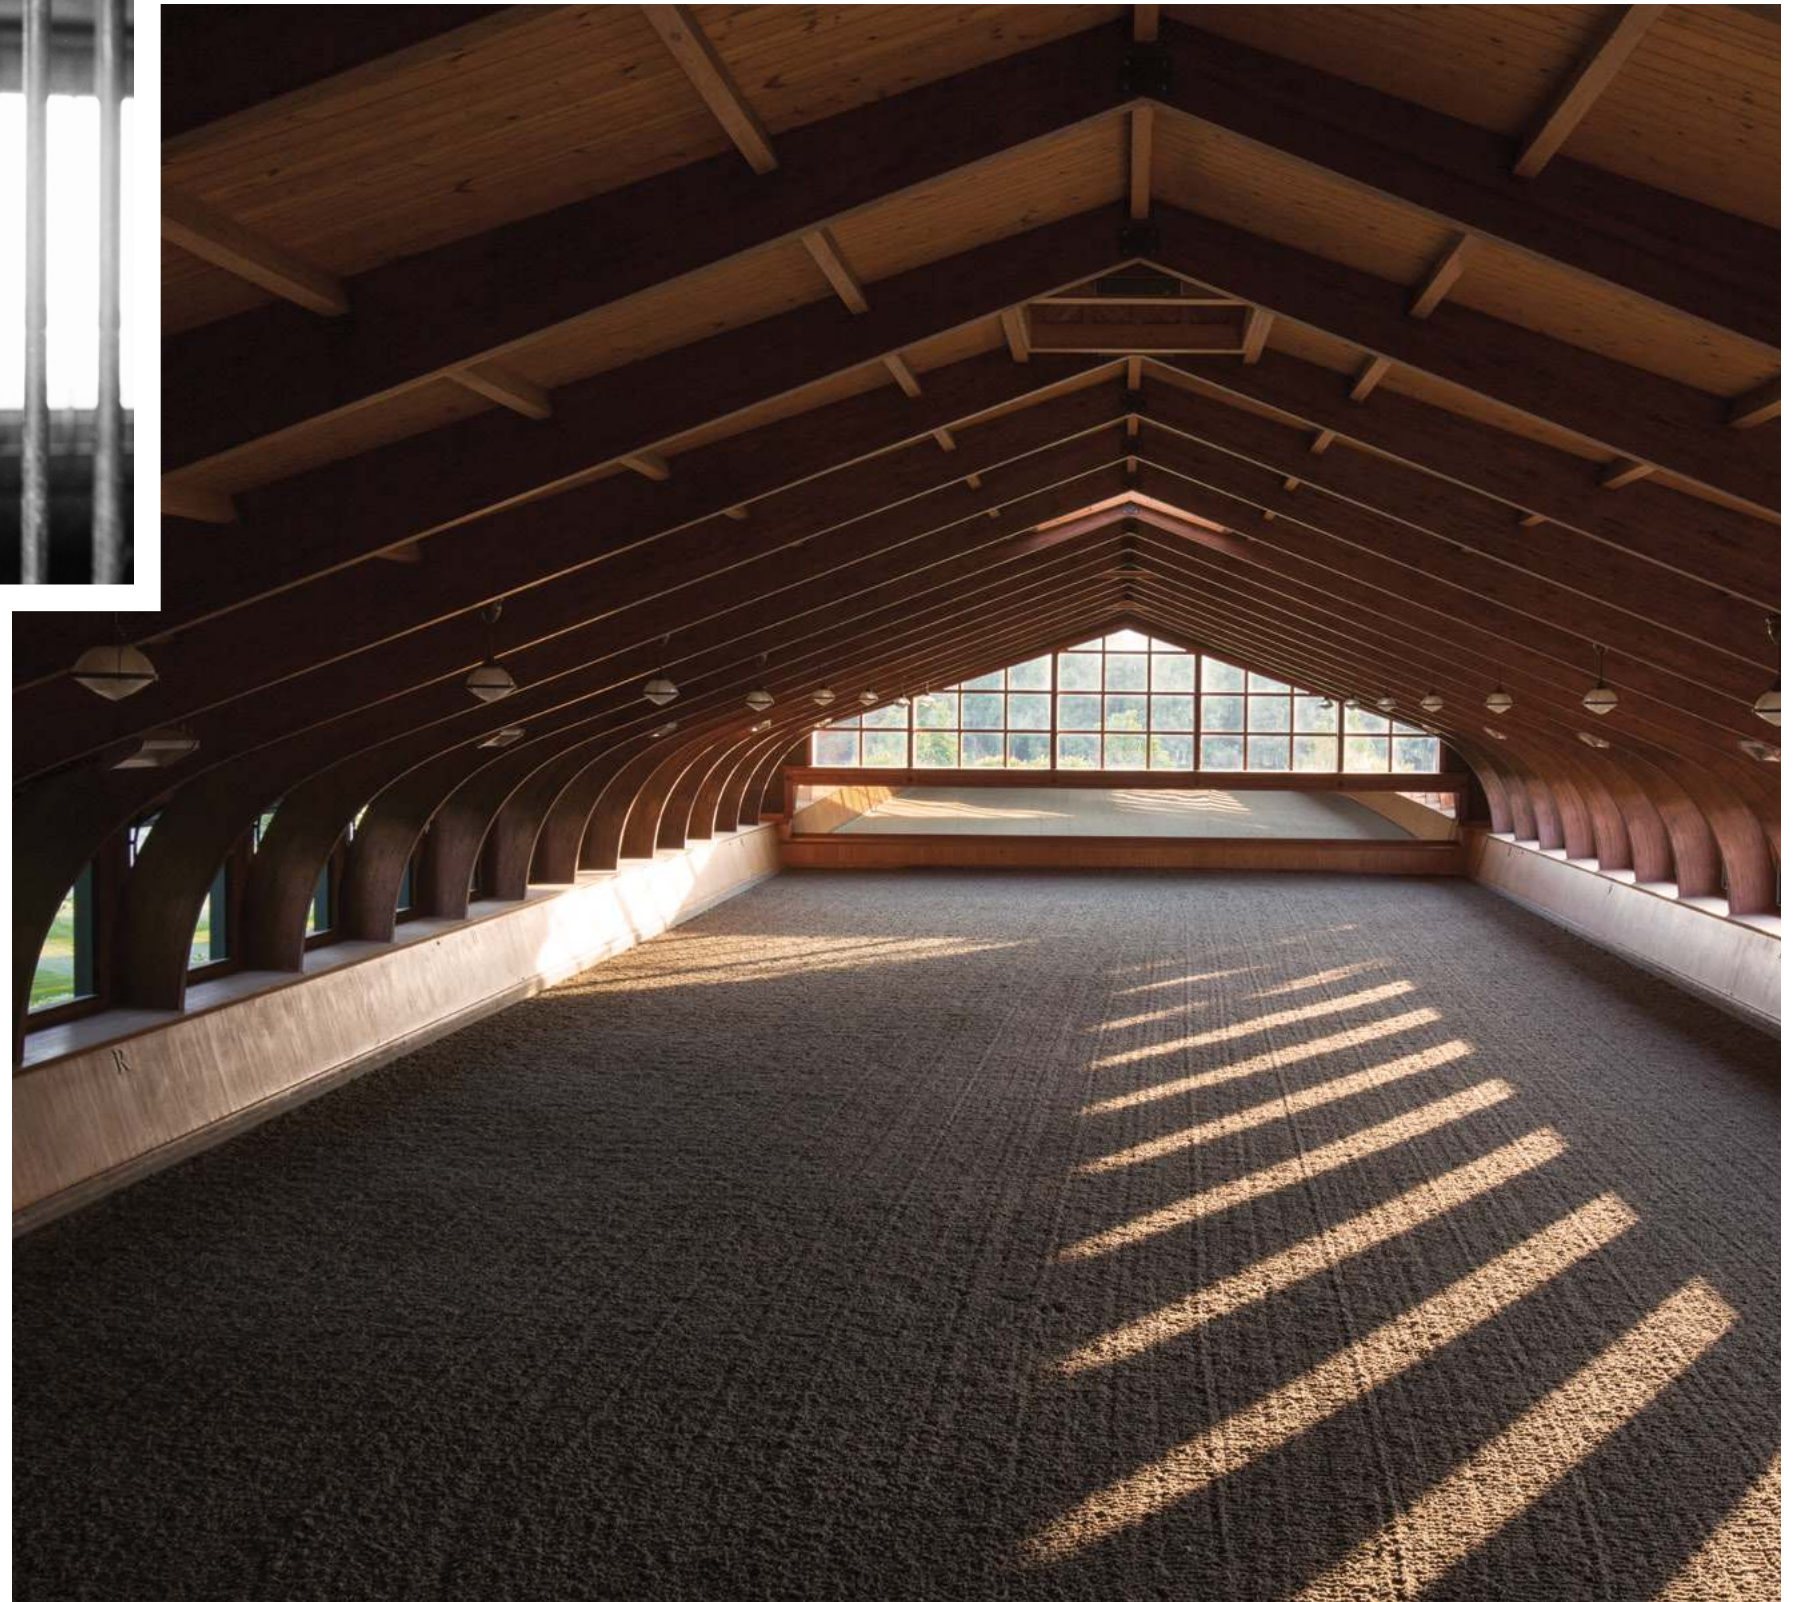

What's Your Discipline?

That's the first question we ask at the beginning of an equestrian project—because we know it matters. Different disciplines have different needs, and we make sure to meet them every time. Whether you ride Western, compete as a show jumper, play polo, or keep and ride horses just for pleasure, we build just for you.

We start by looking at the best use of your land, how to take advantage of sunlight and wind for both the health of your horses and energy efficiency. Then we custom build, paying close attention to every aspect: the size and number of stalls, ventilation, flooring, lighting, hay and waste handling, and more. We may add wash stalls, tack rooms, an indoor arena—even offices or a clubhouse. However you and your horses need to use your space, we'll make sure your new equestrian facility works for you both.

Custom Details Make the Difference

This stately facility provides plenty of space for both horse and rider, including a riding arena, clubhouse, and porches. Thoughtful touches can be found throughout, such as heated flooring, a state-of-the-art ventilation system, and custom hardware cast specifically for this project. When it came to the wash stalls, we worked to ensure both comfort and functionality. The stalls feature custom divider walls, rubber pavers, rings specially treated for horse ties, and a stunning corner cabinet for storing grooming supplies.

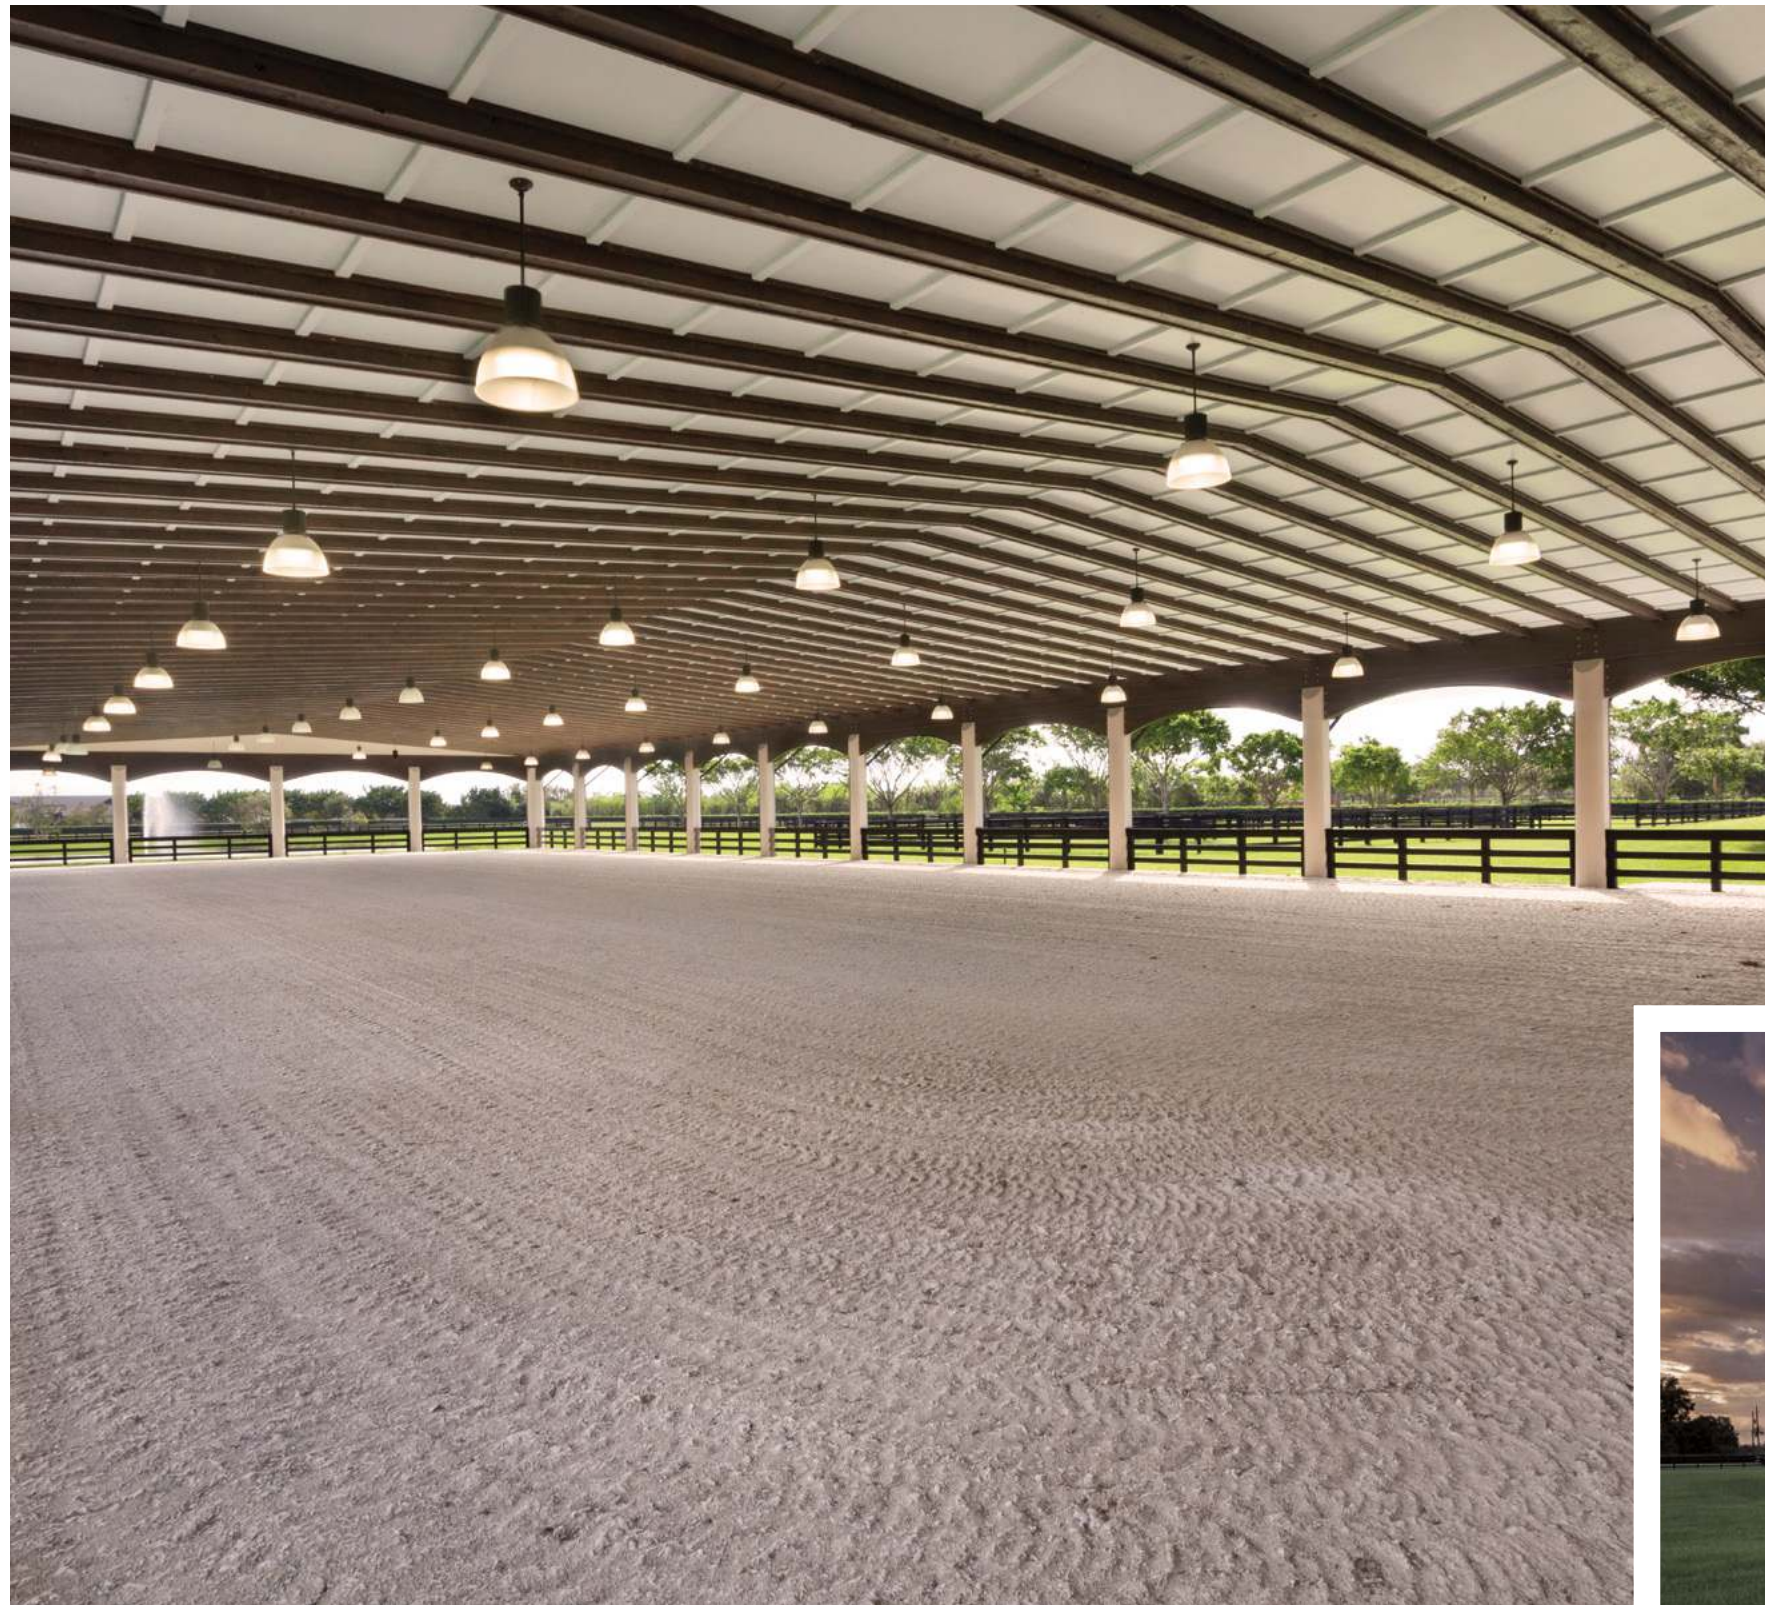

But the real star of the show may just be the tack room. Beautiful wide-plank walls complement the unique ceiling design, giving the room a warm, cozy feeling. Reclaimed white oak islands, boot shelves, saddle racks, and bridle racks round out the tack room with exceptional beauty and functionality.

Timeless Style Meets Modern Functionality

We nestled this barn and riding arena into the property's hillside, making it look as though they had always been a part of the landscape. The octagonal timber frame barn includes stalls with heavy-duty custom fronts, as well as three large grooming areas, each with its own reclaimed wood island. Special lighting was chosen to complement the timber framing throughout.

Joined to the barn by a covered walkway is a large arched riding arena. The arena's windows open fully, bringing the outdoors inside when the weather is fine. This project was a long time coming—we helped the owner through a three-year permit process—and it was well worth it in the end.

Beauty That Lasts

A B&D equestrian facility is always built to last, but this barn and arena were built just a little bit tougher—located in Florida, they were designed to meet stringent local hurricane codes. The arched arena is supported by massive concrete columns, held in place by 17,000 pounds of stainless-steel tie-down brackets!

Still, this project proves that strong can be beautiful. A light stucco adorns the walls, and we used warm cedar for the soffits and fascia. A tile roof color coordinated with the barn's trim pulls everything together.

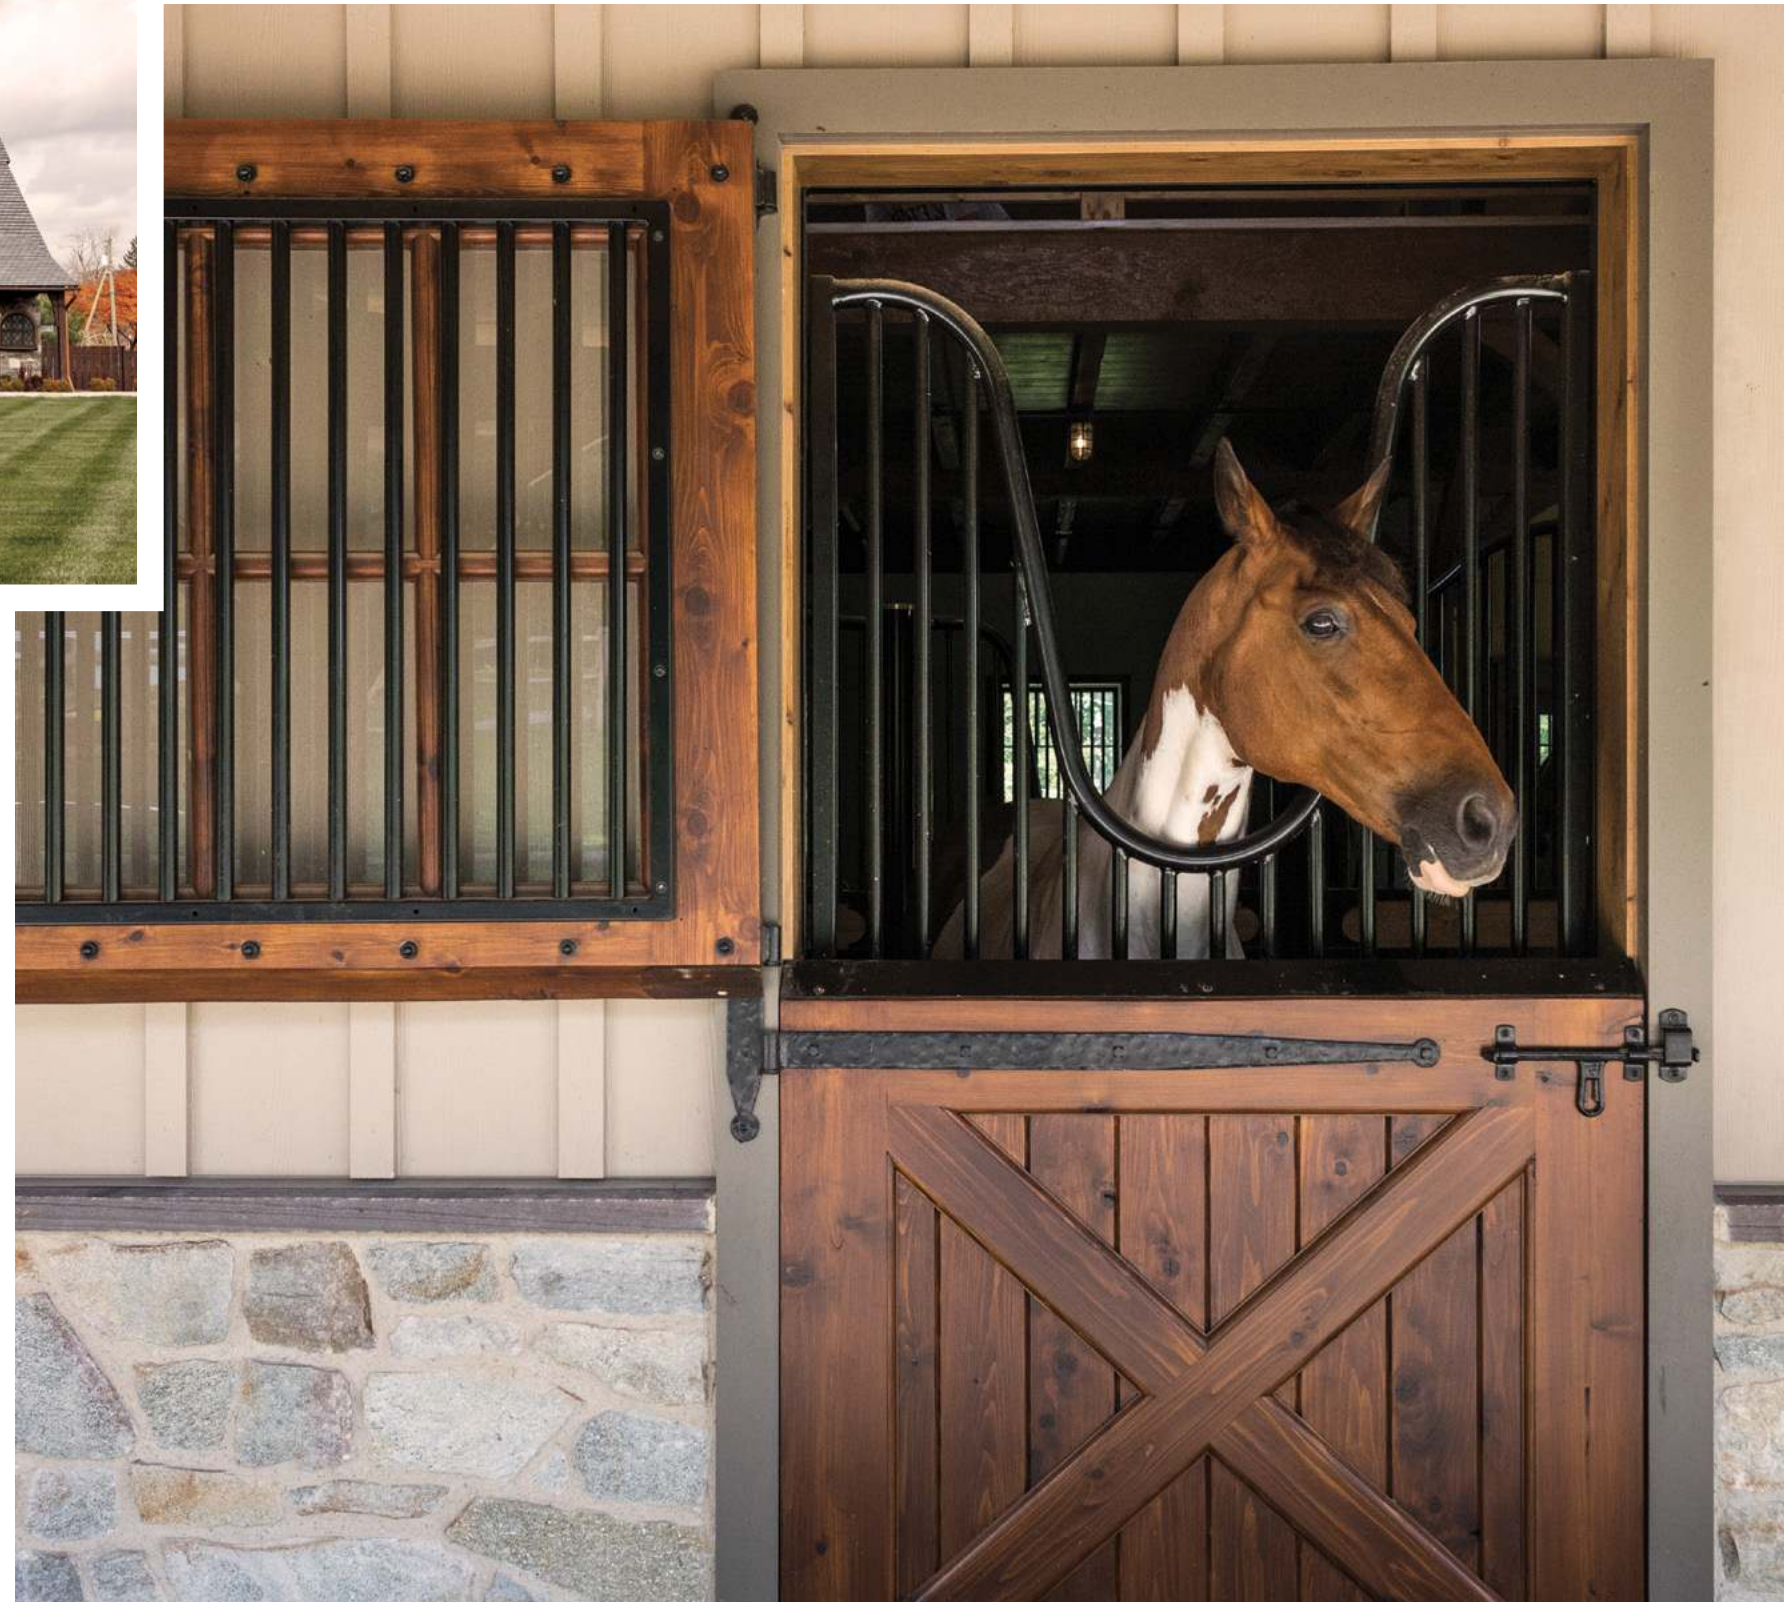

Our Commitment to the Equestrian Lifestyle

Many builders can build a barn, but not every builder can build a home for horses. At B&D Builders, we understand the lives of horses. Which roofing materials are best to keep them calm in a storm? How do you position a wash stall drain so a horse won't get spooked? Where in a barn are horses most likely to injure themselves? We consider these questions—and so much more—and build accordingly.

We've spent a lifetime with horses. And with more than 20 years in the building industry, we've married that knowledge to a commitment to craftsmanship and working one-on-one with customers. We take pride in our work, and we approach every project as a true collaboration, an opportunity to make your vision a reality. We're not happy until you are, and we'll do what it takes to get things done. It's not just a slogan. At B&D Builders, we build it right, or we don't build it.
